Message from the President

May solidarity be a way of coming out of this pandemic crisis better, stronger and together. An opportunity to rediscover the importance of other people, especially the most disadvantaged, and to take us back to the roots of our mission, our daily activity of Food Banks in Europe. With the support of everyone – public authorities, businesses, charities, volunteers, and citizens – we can grow together through adversity and shed a positive light on a brighter future.

Jacques Vandenschrik, President, European Food Banks Federation

Working together to challenge COVID-19

Since March, the COVID-19 has presented an unprecedented challenge across Europe, disrupting the normality of our lives and with severe impacts on our society and economy.

On 13 March 2020 the World Health Organization declared Europe as the epicenter of the COVID-19 pandemic. Some countries, such as Italy and Spain, were the first to be hit hard and soon after the coronavirus spread all over the continent with immediate evident socio-economic consequences.

The pandemic has thrown many people into insecurity overnight, highlighting the importance of food security in Europe.

In this context, the access to food has proved to be a priority, underlining the importance of an easily accessible, affordable, healthy and balanced diet for all. In each corner of Europe, many images are testimonials of this evidence, such as long lines at the entrance of supermarkets or volunteers working every day to bring food to elderly, disabled, and deprived people as well as families facing unexpected difficulties in this period.

After the first months of crisis and until this fall, Europe appeared to have the COVID-19 under control. However, Europe is once again the active centre of the pandemic and is recording a dramatic rise in infections which is stretching the capacity of hospitals. Some governments are reimposing tough new lockdowns. Thousands of new daily cases are reported across Europe.
The pandemic revealed our strengths and weaknesses, highlighting the importance of local communities, ready to cooperate for the good of all with a strong synergy between public authorities, civil society organisations and all the actors involved.

It is evident that the pandemic has had a huge impact on our daily lives and has affected the entire food system.

COVID-19 has been a wake-up call for the European Food Banks Federation and our members.

Since its outbreak, our members have daily worked facing the challenge not just to get food from the food supply chain but also to ensure its safe delivery to charities. Our members have relentlessly recovered surplus food to assist charitable organizations that feed people in need. The health emergency and the consequent socio-economic crisis, especially during the first wave of COVID-19, varied from country to country but it is evident everywhere that the COVID-19 crisis has brought a new food emergency with an increased demand for food.

Our latest report released in September 2020 highlights a 30% increase in food demand, with a range from 6% up to 90% in the different countries, coming from new targets of poverty: jobless people, families with children and elderly people living alone. Our members have faced similar challenges and have provided responses that can be key aspects when coping with the second wave and the prolonged crisis generated by the pandemic. While the contexts may differ and tailored solutions may be unique, the challenges are commonly felt, and the responses rely on motivation, innovation and adaptation.

The European Food Banks Federation conducted 3 surveys – in April, July and September 2020 – to monitor and assess the impact of COVID-19 on its members and their responses. The results were featured in three reports:

1. Present challenges and urgent need of European Food Banks / April 2020
2. European Food Banks in a post COVID-19 Europe / July 2020
3. European Food Banks today: commitment, creativity and openness to change / September 2020
When it seemed that we had failed to protect our people, in many ways, Europeans, whether they are volunteers and employees of the Food Banks and their affiliated charities, policy makers, businesses or private citizens, have proven that, in the face of this crisis, they stand ready to lift each other up.

In order to meet immediate needs and provide a concrete response to the emergency, on 21 March, the European Food Banks Federation launched an open call for solidarity and established a COVID-19 Social Emergency Fund to secure the activity of its members and ensure no good food is going to waste while helping charities to feed people in need.

The response to this call has gone beyond any expectations. In this period many companies have offered their support with economic donations to sustain the daily activity of Food Banks. Thanks to this concrete engagement between March and November 2020, the European Food Banks Federation has supported its members with over €4.2 million for COVID-19 related actions in 27 countries*

The funds have been used for concrete needs: increased costs of the daily activity (rent, utilities, etc.), additional staff for handling the increased volumes of food, new vehicles to ensure food redistribution, digital tools to facilitate communication, new equipment for the warehouses, PPE to protect volunteers and employees, new warehouse IT systems, and much more.

* These figures refer to the period 1 January – 15 October 2020.
With an agile determination, a continuous process innovation, and a widespread coverage of the territory, European Food Banks are demonstrating the strength to adapt to the new challenging context ensuring a safe food redistribution to charities.

Moreover, in line with their core business, many companies also donated food or other goods such as PPE, transports, carton boxes. Finally, many companies have decided to extend their commitment to their employees proposing and involving them in fundraising campaigns to support European Food Banks.

Since the beginning of the pandemic up to date, the support of Food Banks continues to be more and more essential so that no good food goes to waste and can acquire a new precious value for all those charities helping the most deprived.

Food Banks are therefore playing a key role in preventing food waste for a social purpose, planning and adapting to face the challenges of today and tomorrow. In this period, European Food Banks have also become a point of reference for donated food by the agri-food chain. In addition to regular donations of surplus food, indeed, they have received and managed increased amounts of non-perishable food donated by companies to respond to the immediate needs.

As the pandemic continues, we are committed to ensuring our daily activity so that we can manage through the crisis and build resilience against future shocks. This crisis can be an accelerator of innovation to enhance efficiency and effectiveness and to produce a beneficial effect on the food system as a whole.

The European Food Banks Federation would like to thank all the members for their contributions. Furthermore, a grateful acknowledgement for their ongoing activity which makes a difference every day in Europe.
Albania

After the earthquake of November 2019, Albania has seen an increase in the number of people in need and the COVID-19 emergency has worsened that situation.

During COVID-19, the recovery of fresh food products has tripled per month and Food Bank Albania is redistributing more surplus food than ever.

Food Bank Albania managed to install a cold storage room for fresh products so that the food will be available for distribution longer. At the same time, Food Bank Albania has increased the pick-ups of fresh food from further locations, mapping the main locations of fresh food surpluses.

The increase of surplus food donations and the new cooling room will allow Food Bank Albania to support more charities and soup kitchens in almost all areas of the country.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means to keep fighting for the mission of fresh and nutritious food for all people, rejoicing for all the donor businesses and partners since we continue working towards a near future where we will see a favourable legislation on food donations.

Macro Group - owner of the Turkish supermarket chain "Etsan" and long lasting partner and neighbour of Wiener Tafel at Vienna wholesale market - was one of the first companies to react when Wiener Tafel asked for help at the beginning of the first lock-down in March, particularly asking for durable goods for charities supported by Wiener Tafel.

Despite highly challenging times, employees of Macro Group still found some free time to put together hundreds of food parcels for Wiener Tafel. The parcels represented a broad mix of durable food like cans, oil, milk products as well as hygiene articles. They were very well perceived by the approx. 100 charities that are supported in the Vienna region.

Macro Group is a great collaborator of Wiener Tafel and a best-practice example, with fast and efficient help when there is somebody in need, particularly in times of COVID-19.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means exploring new ways of collaboration with our long lasting and strong partners.

Alexandra Gruber, Managing Director

The number of people requesting food aid in the first few months reached unprecedented levels. The number of adults and children rose from around 170,000 in February to almost 195,000 in May, an increase of almost 15%. This influx caused a huge spike in food redistribution. From March to June 2020, 55.4% more food was redistributed compared to the same period last year.

The work of the members of the FBBA in Belgium has been severely tested but thanks to the great wave of solidarity and the spontaneous mobilization of many temporary volunteers, the distribution of food has been ensured on a large scale. Exceptional financial support from institutions, government, companies, and individuals supported FBBA to meet the increased demand during the first COVID-19 wave.

The COVID-19 crisis has also highlighted the importance of the Fund for European Aid to the Most Deprived (FEAD), without which significant supply problems would have arisen.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means continuing the efforts to improve collaboration with local authorities and organisations active in the field of poverty reduction.

Jef Mottar, CEO

55.4% more food was redistributed from March to June 2020, compared to the same period last year.
Bulgarian Food Bank is a recognized partner to the food industry in transforming surplus food into valuable social programs. 2020 is a challenging year in many ways and the COVID-19 pandemic has added additional pressure, both financially and organizationally.

Until the end of November 2020, Bulgarian Food Bank saved and distributed approximately 800,000 BGN (400,000 EUR) in food, while for the same period in 2019 the food saved valued 550,000 BGN (275,000 EUR). This is due to higher response to the crisis by food industry companies and by the society as a whole.

A very inspiring example for that was a two-hour media event, TV and online, during which more than 200,000 BGN (100,000 EUR) were donated to support the work of the Bulgarian Food Bank.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means to strengthen the capacity to deliver food to more distant locations and to more organisations taking care of people in need.

Tsanka Milanova, Executive Director
Česká Federace Potravinových Bank (CFPB) saved tons of food from school canteens and fruit programs in the past months, which would otherwise have been wasted because of the closure of schools.

Moreover, the members of CFPB were exceptionally involved in the redistribution to people in need, mainly with the help of city councils and village authorities.

Thanks to the daily operations of the members of CFPB, products such as milk, cheese and fruit were redistributed to people in need but also to those who are old or disabled, or just mums with many kids. This was realized in cooperation with the Ministry of Agriculture.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means growing and improving our recovery and redistribution processes in cooperation with stakeholders, partners, and government. Together we can help more people and fight against food waste more efficiently.

Veronika Láchová, CEO

The members of CFPB in Czech Republic also prevented wasting food from HORECA sector and school canteens.

During the COVID-19 crisis, Czech Food Banks and Tafel Sachsen e.V. supported a cross-border cooperation against waste to help the most deprived.
During the lockdown, many restaurants decided to use their surplus food to make deepfrozen soups for Toidupank, the food bank in Estonia. Volunteers and social workers used to bring the soups to elderly and sick people who could not leave their homes.

Many other companies (importers, hotels, spas, ferry companies, caterers for airplanes, food producers, cinemas, supermarkets, etc.) also donated surplus food to Toidupank.

For example, the Estonian shipping company Tallink has donated almost half a ton of food to the Food Bank organisation Toidupank. Tallink said on its social media account that the move was made due to its ships being mostly off their regular schedules with the ongoing coronavirus pandemic and the government’s emergency measures. The food includes sausages, cheese, and biscuits.

“Due to the emergency situation, a few things are out these days, with ships in port and huge food supplies staying in the fridge,” Tallink wrote on its social media page.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means that more people will understand the importance of food aid and Food Banks. Because of this, more people, firms and local governments might be willing to support the Food Banks.

Piet Boerefijn, Founder and Manager
France

Each of the 79 Banques Alimentaires has adapted to their local context in relation to volunteers, food supply, methods of redistribution in order to ensure that barrier gestures are respected.

After the donations of fresh food products from the restaurant industry at the beginning of the crisis, the situation led the French Banques Alimentaires to draw on their stocks of dry products: there is a 22% drop in stocks between March and November 2020 compared to the same period in 2019. Indeed, the demand increased by 20-25% on average: 400 new charities joined the network of the Banques Alimentaires during the first lockdown (emergency housing, aid to the homeless, etc.) and 50% signed a sustainable partnership agreement.

Moreover, the teams of the Banques Alimentaires work closely with local authorities to ensure the homogeneous redistribution of food. Following the closure of many partner charities, they have co-organized food aid in certain territories and have gone as far as distribution in certain towns (rural area).

Food Banks and the regional students’ assistance office organized the distributions of food packages and hygiene products for students in precarious situations. The Food Banks also played a pivotal role in local purchasing mechanisms to support producers thanks to government grants in order to support restocking.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means reaffirming the central and pivotal role of Food Banks, their volunteers and employees in the management of food aid system. It is also an opportunity to recall the fundamental role of food aid as a lever for social support and the fight against the isolation of vulnerable people. It is essential to rethink the structural policy to manage the fight against poverty and to encourage all forms of solidarity.

Claude Baland, President
Like in the rest of the world the year 2020 in Germany has been shaped by the COVID-19 pandemic and associated challenges. Almost half of the 950 local organisations of Tafel Deutschland e.V had to close for some time and new, innovative concepts for surplus food redistribution had to be found.

Tafel Deutschland e.V. is proud that after momentary closures in the spring their members quickly pivoted and adapted. Food redistributions took place outdoors, pre-packaged bags and boxes guaranteed the safety on site and those final beneficiaries, who could not come in person, received donations through deliveries.

Tafel Deutschland e.V. also launched a campaign on ‘best before’ dates in collaboration with an agency, which is supporting them with free space in public areas nationwide. This is particularly relevant because of the stockpiling and panic buying that were going on because of the pandemic.

The poster is freely available in multiple languages (German, Arabic, English, Farsi, Russian and Turkish) for Tafel members to order or print.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means thinking ahead and making sure that people who are particularly affected by the pandemic are not left behind. 2020 was a challenging year that leaves us to worry that many of the consequences of the pandemic will only become apparent in 2021. That is why, particularly now, we stand by those who are so often overlooked and speak up for them.

The supply of food in Greece increased during the lockdown period, but food waste remained a significant problem.

It is indicative that since the beginning of the year the donations at the Food Bank Greece exceeded 1,700 tons with an increase of 68% compared to the corresponding period last year. Especially in April, a record was set in the middle of quarantine, with almost 260 tons, just in the Athens Food Bank. In May the donations exceeded 140 tons while in July the high record of 260 tons was met again.

Dimitris Nentas, General Manager of the Food Bank Greece, said that the first period of the coronavirus crisis was really complicated since charities and associations had to operate under strict protocols and some of them ceased to function. However, after the first 10 days, the situation changed. The charities expanded their operations and as social needs became more and more intense, they were motivated and began to serve food.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means to continue to carry on our activity. Since early 2020 Food Bank Greece is handling record quantities. COVID-19 is testing our capacity and so far we are coping well and are confident that we shall continue so in the future. One big plus of the crisis is the increased visibility of Food Banks in our society.

Panagis Vourloumis, President
The Hungarian Food Bank Association (HFBA) continually receives donations of surplus food from its corporate partners in order to meet the growing needs of those in need.

In the past 10 months of the year, the HFBA distributed more than 6,600 tons of food, for a value of almost HUF 5.8 billion. Only in the first month of COVID-19, in March, 715 tons of food were delivered to those in need as immediate assistance for an amount of more than HUF 580 million. “We consider it very important to keep our operations going, the situation of a lot of people depends on us now. Most of all, we need additional surplus food and financial assistance” said Balázs Cseh, President of the Hungarian Food Bank Association.

The difficulties caused by COVID-19 have been a particular challenge for those in need as their situation, care and prospects become even more precarious. In order to receive support even in these difficult times, the role of the organisations that help them will increase even more.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means that we hope that food companies and individuals who wanted to relieve the effects of the COVID-19 crisis with their support and helped those in need together with Hungarian Food Bank Association will stay with us next year as well. We do our best to keep caring for people in need together with our partners in 2021.

Balazs Cseh, President
Between March and June 2020, FoodCloud distributed 968 tonnes of food, equating to 2.3 million meals, to a network of over 600 charities across Ireland through their retail technology platform and three warehouses or hubs. This figure was almost double the same period in 2019, reflecting in the increased food demand across communities.

As part of their COVID response, FoodCloud launched an emergency food and funding appeal, which supported to employ 8 new warehouse operatives, double the transport capacity and introduce weekly routes through third party logistics companies and developed 15 new strategic partnerships in 17 Counties with community services and organisations to ensure they could support those in rural communities.

For the first time in their 7 years in operation, FoodCloud’s food industry partners donated non-surplus stock to help meet the demand and in partnership with their key retail partners, unveiling a new food initiative called “Food For Ireland” in September where shoppers were able to donate non-perishable food in over 400 stores.

The pandemic raised the profile of food recovery organisations in mitigating supply chain volatility. We were a necessary vehicle for redistributing sudden spikes in surplus food whilst also supporting communities resulting from unprecedented increase in demand, increasing food security at such a challenging time for so many.

Iseult Ward, CEO

It is predicted that FoodCloud will distribute over 6.7M meals equivalent by end 2020.
The sudden closure of commercial catering has generated significant volumes of surplus food. The main restaurant chains contacted Banco Alimentare to recover about 50 tons of food all over the country.

The Municipalities, the Civil Protection, catering companies, general markets, public transport companies, Banco Alimentare, Caritas Ambrosiana, and the Italian Red Cross have developed the Municipal Operations Centers (in Italian COC) to centralize the entire food supply chain and overcome the closures of charities due to volunteers over 65.

#SOSTegno straordinario, a program coordinated by FBAO and Caritas Italiana funded Banco BPM, has enabled the recovery of food to support families in difficulty. Caritas had to collect enough food to guarantee 1,250 groceries shopping per month. FBAO was involved in the recovery of food worth € 250,000 in order to guarantee the variety of products in the baskets.

Federalimentare and Banco Alimentare have joined forces to face the pandemic and help the most deprived. Many associated companies during Easter period donated food products for a total of over 100 tons.

The Italian Ministry of Agricultural, Food and Forestry Policies has financed the recovery of unsold food from the cold meats, dairy products and fruit and vegetables sectors due to the restaurant closure for a value of €300,000,000. Since October, Banco Alimentare has started to redistribute to charities and will continue to do so in the next months.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means to continue doing what we have been doing since March: our ordinary business in an extraordinary situation. We think it is important that everyone gives serious consideration to their task in moments of crisis.

Giovanni Bruno, President
Maisto bankas, the Food Bank in Lithuania, is fully operating even under these difficult conditions.

At the beginning of the pandemic, Maisto bankas reported a decrease of 25% of small charities that closed because they could not operate, which led to an increase of individuals that needed support in the places where the charities didn’t operate. The other 75% of partner organisations collaborating with Maisto bankas operate on the same or even bigger scale.

Maisto bankas launched a campaign to gather non-perishable food in the biggest distribution chains of Lithuania, asking for food donations and surplus food.

As expected, Maisto bankas experienced a lack of volunteers in the first days of COVID, that is why they have joined a national campaign to recruit new volunteers, working even with companies that provided taxi services to promote volunteers among their drivers to help delivering the food.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means increase awareness. The pandemic gave us a challenge to help isolated people and overstressed families, but it also gave us an opportunity to unite more than usual volunteers and donors in an action to help those affected. The pandemic has brought more awareness about our work and has given us a prospect to involve more people and businesses in the future.

Simonas Gurevičius, Director
The Malta Food Bank Foundation (MFBF) has seen requests for help increased manifold. Requests for additional help came from NGOs that lost many sources of funding and from single families who found themselves in shortage due to a reduced income.

Despite the hardship, new initiative sprouted too. Companies, NGOs, individuals and employees from private companies, including a local bank as well as other employees from governmental departments collected money and bought food that was donated to MFBF. Importers and retailers donated surplus food to MFBF and over the last month alone, the MFBF saw a huge increase in the donation of food.

One particular initiative that deserves a commendable mention is that of a chef whose restaurant had to close down due to the lockdown. He collected excess ingredients from various donors and prepared meals for the needy at his restaurant. The MFBF collaborated fully on this initiative by donating surplus meat to MFBF and the chef prepared nutritious fresh meals, which then the MFBF redistributed to partner charities.

The donation of a refrigerated/freezer van has further saved food as during COVID-19 pandemic MFBF could receive and redistribute surplus of frozen and chilled food that was donated. Moreover, MFBF was able to rescue a great amount of food due to a surplus of fruit and veg that was on the market which would have otherwise gone to waste.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means the opening of new horizons with new contacts established during the pandemic. This time inspired MFBF to be more visible and active in taking the initiative of educating the public on saving all food, in particular nutritious food that otherwise go to waste.

Irene Schembri, Founder/Chairperson
The Groente & Fruitbrigade has saved 1,000,000 kilos of fruit and vegetables from waste and delivered them to Voedselbanken Nederland since 2018, thanks to the involvement of volunteers and new suppliers.

In these times it appears even more important than usual to provide the poorest people in the Netherlands with fruit and vegetables. Given the importance of fresh food aid, the Groente & Fruitbrigade is committed to expanding with new locations.

Voedselbanken Nederland started a trial in the summer of 2018 to get more fruit and vegetables into the food packages. The suppliers are fruit and vegetable companies that donate their surplus. They are fruit and vegetables products with a spot or a slightly different shape or colour, which are still perfectly suitable for consumption.

In almost 1 year, the Groente & Fruitbrigade collected over 1,000,000 kilos of fruit and vegetables. With this, the organisation supported approximately 88,000 people per week through Voedselbanken Nederland.

With the coronavirus crisis, the supply of fresh food to the Voedselbanken Nederland is more important than ever. The team’s ambition is to provide all beneficiaries of Voedselbanken Nederland in the Netherlands with 1 kg of fruit and vegetables per week.

Having the confidence, we can handle the challenges that 2021 will undoubtedly bring. In the past year we received massive support from all over society. We are overwhelmed by all the contributions and donations from companies, foundations, individuals.

The daily activities of Banka Za Hrana Makedonija in North Macedonia do not stop and in this period of emergency it contributed to support the most vulnerable people.

Banka Za Hrana Makedonija is the only organisation in North Macedonia that provides aid to persons and families in need. In fact, after several appeals and maximum engagements of all members and volunteers, Banka Za Hrana Makedonija succeeded to recover surplus food and redistributed food and hygienic materials in several municipalities. More and more municipalities are approaching and accepting the Banka Za Hrana Makedonija as real system to face the problems of hunger and poverty.

Over 4,000 households have been supported and still will be supported in the upcoming period, depending on the operators and their quantity of surplus food. Moreover, a lot of companies decided to donate to the Banka Za Hrana Makedonija mainly surplus food to be redistributed.

Last but not least, during the COVID-19 pandemic, the President of North Macedonia decided to support and join the Banka Za Hrana Makedonija in this challenging period.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means solidarity which is the challenging formula if we want to save the food and feed the people in need. We are here to support the most deprived, but we need actions and support from all the stakeholders.

Dushko Hristov, President
While the COVID-19 situation put extra pressure on the Food Banks Norway, these adapted and responded quickly and efficiently to the COVID-19 outbreak. From the week the national social distance measures were put in place in late March, until end of May, when restrictions started losing up, the Food Banks Norway rescued and redistributed record amounts of surplus food.

To evaluate the response of the Food Banks Norway during the COVID-19 outbreak, a survey was circulated to its partner organizations. The results of the survey showed that over 82% of the organizations were satisfied with the amount, quality and variety of food during the outbreak.

Food Banks Norway published also a report about the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on its network of Norwegian food banks and partner organizations.

Although the pandemic brought with it many limitations, it also opened the door to opportunities and innovation. Through the project Matsentralen Kitchen, the Food Banks in Oslo and Bergen were able to turn surplus ingredients originally destined to commercial kitchens, into ready meals to be redistributed through partner organisations.

Another project that allowed Food Banks Norway to both be able to receive larger volumes of surplus food and secure a fair redistribution of food through the network, was the project of Internal Redistribution, that through generous economic contributions from several actors, allowed to exchange food within the network in an efficient and professional way.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means strengthening the role of Food Banks in the alleviation of both food waste and poverty.

Cristiano Aubert, Chairman of the Board
As a result of the precautions imposed by COVID-19, several Portuguese charities that work with the Federacao Portuguesa dos Bancos Alimentares (FPBA) suspended their activity, supressing the supply of food to a large number of deprived people. Nevertheless, some of these organisations, if helped by volunteers, can reorganise, and redistribute food to the most needed.

Aware of this dramatic situation, that is becoming bigger every day, the FPBA in partnership with ENTRAJUDA launched “Rede de Emergência Alimentar” (Food Emergency Network).

It is being organized covering the whole country, a system that, with all information collected, makes it possible to give food aid and deliver meals to those who are lonely and on a more hopeless situation.

FPBA is present in this challenging moment where people in need are more than ever willing for support and hope.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means answering to the increase of demands and keep on the daily work thanks to an innovative technological platform mobilizing more volunteers that contributed to help many families in need. The members of the FPBA were recognized once more as a trustable organisation in Portugal that is always present to those in need. Next year will be better.

Isabel Jonet, President
Even if the year 2020 has been full of challenges caused by the measures against COVID-19 pandemic, the Banca pentru Alimente Bucuresti (BpA) has been glad that new retailers, producers or distributors turned their attention towards the BpA and implicitly towards the prevention of food waste.

To save as much food as possible from the received quantities from the HORECA sector, especially milk products, Banca pentru Alimente Bucuresti decided to split it with the other regional food banks in Romania.

Among the projects from this year, it is important to mention the support of the people hospitalized in a military hospital through the partnership with several corporates.

Through the project “We don’t take a break”, the Banca pentru Alimente Bucuresti helped with 3,500 food packages over 500 disadvantaged families from the suburbs of Bucharest or villages from counties near it.

The Banca pentru Alimente Bucuresti collaborated also with the NGOs that needed storage space and redistributing a part of their donations.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means solidarity and a closer collaboration with the other regional Food Banks from Romania within the recently open National Federation and a common fight against food waste and food insecurity, in the context of the legislation updated in 2020.

Gabriel Sescu, President

286,132 kg
of food was rescued by BpA and its national network of Food Banks in April 2020
The Banka Hrane Beograd (BHB) succeeded in providing the biggest food quantities for the most vulnerable groups during the state of emergency period in Serbia, in April-May.

First, by being involved in a large project endorsed by the City of Belgrade, the BHB contributed to preparing 178,000 packages for the pensioners and then, in an action with the Secretariat for Social Protection, 7,300 food packages for the disabled persons and the children with special needs from the 17 Belgrade municipalities.

After the emergency period the food donations decreased progressively as most of the big companies focused their assistance on hospitals and new specialized ones created due to COVID-19, according to the recommendations by the Government of Serbia to support them primarily.

Despite of the increase in requests for food aid and our many appeals addressed to the companies, the response was and still is weak. The BHB has also tried to provide food through a donation platform, by getting a humanitarian SMS number, boosting posts on social media etc., but the results were similar.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means strengthening our internal capacities as well as our relationship with all relevant actors in the society and expand them in order to be able together to respond more adequately to increasing requests from vulnerable people though solidarity.

Nemanja Nedović, Chairman of the Board

Since March 2020, it has daily supported the citizens all over the country. Specifically, the situation in marginalised Roma communities in East and South Slovakia was the most complicated since they have very bad access to food. Three communities were in quarantine for more than 30 days (Krompachy, Žehra and Bystrany) and the Potravinová Banka Slovenska helped them with food, together with the Slovak Armed Forces and with the Office of the Plenipotentiary of the Government of the Slovak republic for Roma Communities. The Potravinová Banka Slovenska also supported the health workers, social field workers and volunteers who were in the first line. Since March to October 2020 the Potravinová Banka Slovenska donated more than 2,000 tons of food.

Moreover, the Potravinová Banka Slovenska is organising an online food waste education programme for the students at the secondary school, planned for January 2021.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means restructuring the whole system of the organisation and cooperate with partners to make it more effective for the food waste prevention and awareness about it. We need to focus more on education and the participation of young people in our activities.
The SIBAHE – Slovenian Food Bank (SIBAHE) is involved in humanitarian activity with many partner organisations, together with civil protection groups inside municipalities helping more than 10,000 people.

During Easter and Christmas holidays period, the SIBAHE prepared packages of food for families than last year (each worth between 150 and 250 EUR) for 40 families.

The activities continue and, despite the increasing amounts of food donations received, every donated food counts as support the SIBAHE.

SIBAHE remained active through all COVID-19 crises period. We witnessed an increased demand for food aid, especially from families and individuals - this increase in demand has been at least around 30%.

The SIBAHE is taking part in a working group at national level which is preparing a strategy on how to reduce food waste in the framework of the SDG 12.3.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means looking for opportunities to upgrade all capacities, with the goal to be more effective and responsive in our work tasks, being able to offer support to those in needs.

As many other countries, Spain has been impacted very hard by the coronavirus pandemic. The Spanish Food Banks, under the Federación Española de Bancos de Alimentos (FESBAL), remained open and many initiatives have been taken in order to respond to the social emergency that the pandemic is causing for a lot of people in Spain.

FESBAL set up a crisis committee to respond to COVID-19 and has managed to get the 54 Food Banks of the Federation and their teams of volunteers, despite the fact that some of them are among the population at risk due to their age, to establish a minimum service so that no one is left without food.

In addition, new young volunteers and some units of the Armed Forces (including the Royal Guard) have replaced volunteers who have been unable to keep up with the activity. Given the impossibility of making face-to-face donations as a result of the State of Alarm, digital donations have been promoted, as well as dedicated web pages and a big virtual food collection with an extraordinary response from the society.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means keeping on with the generosity that Spanish people demonstrated when the need for food is triggered by the pandemic.

After numerous food redistributions since the start of the pandemic, Partage in Switzerland remains on the front line.

At the start of the lockdown, Partage initiated the distribution of vouchers for people in need. From 8 June to 11 July, the operation “Geneve solidaire” invited Genevans to make in-kind donations directly in the supermarkets.

The Canton of Geneva also supports Partage with an extraordinary grant, to support its activity.

Moreover, starting Tuesday 16 June, full shopping bags were distributed on several township sites. Each bag contained thirty food and hygiene products. The distribution started and will continue in the coming months.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means forcing the entire Partage team and the stakeholders involved in the fight against food insecurity and waste in Geneva to develop an active partnership which we hope will grow in the coming years.

Despite the COVID-19 crisis, KCCF Food Bank is becoming stronger, feeling even more socially responsible as ever before. As the coronavirus pandemic spreads in Ukraine, the KCCF Food Bank concentrates the efforts to three directions:

- supporting for patients and medical staff at COVID hospitals and emergency medical service staff
- supporting for people in need through NGOs around the country
- strengthening safety policies – both for food products and people communicating, including donor’s staff, KCCF Food Bank’s colleagues, volunteers and recipients.

From the very beginning of pandemic enfolds the major food donors of KCCF Food Bank have been increasing donations, helping with delivery, so the KCCF Food Bank was able to serve 45% more people in comparison to total people supported in 2019. The staff and permanent volunteers managed the increased activities during this challenging time, staying calm, positive and working hard.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means expanding the cooperation with current suppliers in the direction of logistics, to unite the efforts of all food chain participants who have the ability and desire to improve the situation of food insecurity in Ukraine, by helping these who are in needs, saving food from waste and improving the environment.

Food that makes a difference: FareShare delivers quality surplus food from across the food industry and gets it to 11,000 charities and community groups across the UK, including school breakfast clubs, older people’s lunch clubs, homeless shelters, and community cafes.

Since the beginning of the pandemic, FareShare has more than doubled the amount of food delivered each week to respond to the crisis. At the peak of the crisis, FareShare was providing more than three million meals a week and 90% of the charities served expect demand to remain the same as crisis levels or increase through the winter.

Many of the charities have had to adjust their service to contend with the challenges posed by COVID-19. Lunch clubs have become parcel delivery services and community centres are bringing groceries right to the doorsteps of vulnerable people.

To cope with the demand FareShare secured additional warehouse space in 11 regional centres. FareShare has overhauled the operating procedures to allow, where possible, for social distancing within the warehouses, invested in additional PPE to protect staff and volunteers, and put new hygiene and handwashing measures in place to keep people safe and reduce the risk of transmission.

Looking at 2021, transforming this crisis into an opportunity for our organisation means engaging as many businesses, government agencies, charities, and individuals to recognise the hunger that exists in our countries, acknowledge the wasting of perfectly good food that co-exists in our countries, and work together to radically reduce the environmental impact of surplus food and reduce the levels of hunger at the same time.

The European Food Banks Federation wants profoundly to thank its members for their daily commitment in preventing food waste and reducing food insecurity in this challenging times. The constant and tireless activity of FEBA members all over Europe makes a real difference and gives a tangible contribution in this demanding period.

The European Food Banks Federation wants also to take this opportunity to gratefully acknowledge the European Commission for concretely supporting the capacity building of FEBA and increasing the expertise to ensure an effective and professional food redistribution to face the challenges of today and tomorrow.

A special thanks also to all the employees of our corporate partners who have supported us, giving free time to their imagination and creativity.

We are grateful to every single individual who has dedicated time and resources to the European Food Banks Federation. Every donation, even the smallest one, has an infinite value for us.

Finally, a special thanks to the 32,280 Food Bankers and volunteers from 430 Food Banks across Europe: your efforts have propelled a wave of solidarity that permitted to continuing, despite the difficulties, to redistribute food to the charities that every day meet the needs of the most hit by this crisis.

Never before have we realised the importance of having people close to us. Our gratitude goes to your support and proximity in this moment. It is a privilege to work with and for you and we hope to do so today and for years to come.

Thank you!
